Jamestown, New York

Located at the southeastern tip of Chautauqua Lake, Jamestown is the largest city in Chautauqua County. It is a city rich in historic sites and museums, such as the Roger Tory Peterson Institute of Natural History, the Fenton History Center, the Jamestown Audubon Center, the Reg Lenna Civic Center, and the National Comedy Center. Jamestown is hometown to Lucille Ball, Robert H. Jackson, Chief Prosecutor of Nazi War Criminals at Nuremberg, Germany and former Supreme Court Justice, and national recording artists, The 10,000 Maniacs.

Jamestown supports a broad diversity of industry, commercial businesses, and financial institutions. It provides a myriad of cultural and recreational opportunities for its residents. Chautauqua Institution, a world-renowned educational and cultural center, is within minutes of the city.

Jamestown is home to Jamestown Community College, a two-year college in the SUNY system and Jamestown Business College, a two-year and four-year private college. Several well-known four-year colleges and universities are also located nearby.
